Doctors clean algae from fuel?

Ft. Myers, FL – January 24, 2007

Algae-X International welcomes Diesel Doctor as the newest dealer for its fuel conditioning products. “90% of diesel engine problems originate from contaminated fuel,” noted Jeff Werner, owner of Diesel Doctor, “As fuel and oil become a more expensive and limited resource, it only makes sense to keep it as clean as possible to assure optimum efficiency.”

Diesel Doctor recently outfitted the newly established Clean Fuel and Tank Inc. service business with the necessary equipment to get the job done right. Clean Fuel and Tank Inc. goes anywhere in Lee County, Florida cleaning fuel tanks aboard yachts, RV’s, trucks and stored fuel for stand-by power generators, marinas & fueling stations. Utilizing the Algae-X MTC-1000 Mobile Tank Cleaning System, contaminated fuels and oils can be restored to their “clear and bright” condition at a rate of 900 gallons per hour. It will efficiently remove water, sludge, contaminants and sediments that naturally accumulate in tanks.

“Southwest Florida is notable for its sun & sand, and also for its snowbirds and hurricanes. Many of our seasonal residents keep their boats and RV’s in storage here over the summer,” said Randy Mote, owner of Clean Fuel and Tank Inc. “When they return in the winter, they may find that the fuel in their tank has deteriorated so much that there is a thick layer of sludge at the bottom of the tank in addition to water contamination. Boats and RVs are luxury items, but emergency power generators must start immediately and run reliably; the only way to assure that is with clean fuel.”

Ft Myers based Algae-X International designs and manufactures innovative products and systems that optimize fuel quality, ensuring reliable engine operation.
